Rumor That Peter Brown, Two-Year-Old, Is Older Under Investigation.

Special Disputch to TRE New YORK HEALD. NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 6.—Apprentice Johnny Corcoran, the riding sensa-tion of the Jefferson meeting, kept up his bright record this afternoon by piloting Rock Salt and Rama to victory and so dividing the honors with Chick Lang. who held the spotlight with equal com-who held the spotlight with equal command during last year's racing here.

The Corcoran followers met with considerable discouragement before, the light came. In the opener his mount, Sam Frank, was left flat footed when the gate went up and Dr. Rae, which he gate went up and Dr. Rae, which he giloted in the second, suffered repeated interference approaching the first turn and was so enveloped in the vast cloud which hindered the progress of the trailers that he finished in the ruck.

Rock Sait, which incidentally was the only Eastern representative to score, showed some of the form displayed during the fall term of Jocky Club tracks by taking the lead and holding it from Better Times, Stump, Jr., and five others, including the heavily backed Felicitous, who suffered at the ragged start. Corcoran's other victory came in the final when he got Rama, owned by his present manager, Mose Goldblatt, home in the lead after the colt appeared beaten entering the stretch.

Lang registered his double early. He got Stamp away among the fortunate few of the dozen in the opener and kept him there long enough to shatter an attempted coup by the Dayton, confered act with the filly Voogeria. Light Wine was Lang's other wimer.

Rumors that Peter Brown is a three-year-old instead of the rumors that the colt Peter Brown is a year older than has been represented throughout the year are being investigated by the stewards, who have also instituted an inquiry into the form reversal shown by the plater Merchant, which won the sixth race on Tuesday. ## CORDIER SURPRISED PAL MORAN TO BOX BY FINK AT SQUASH HANLON AT RINK S. C.

Becisively Outplayed at Yale Club.

· By SAMUEL J. BROOKMAN.

A match that figured to be one of the victory for R. Earl Fink of the Crescent Athletic Club over Auguste J. Cordier, former national champion on the Yale Club courts yesterday. Cordier was considerably off form, while Fink was at his best, and the contest ended in a score of 15—8, 15—5. The victory advanced Fink to the semi-final round in which he was joined by Charles M. Bull, Jr., a fellow player of the Crescent club, Thomas R. Coward, national amateur champion, and Harold R. Mixsell of the Princeton Club.

What surprised about Cordier's game

Princeton Club.

What surprised about Cordier's game was his unusual lack of control and his erratic timing of shots. Undoubtedly Fink's puzzling change of pace had a lot to do with his opponent's unsteadiness, but Cordier has faced the same sort of tactics before and come through with a more impressive exhibition. He contributed eleven of Fink's thirty points with drives into the telltale, many of the errors being made when he was not parerrors being made when he was not par-ticularly hard pressed for time. Neither was he getting the customary sting into Fink's control and at times sensational getting saved many an important point for him. He made some wonderful recoveries of shots that required lightning decision, shots that would have entirely escaped an ordinary player. He anticipated well and he varied his attack and speed puzzlingly. Also he fairly murdered Cordier's service, gaining no small advantage by putting Cordier on the defensive on the first return.

Tom Coward encountered sterner resistance than he had bargained for in his match with William Rand, Jr., of the Harvard Club, who is playing surprisingly effective squash for his first year in Class A company. Pal Moran, the clever and hard hitting lightweight of New Orleans, will appear in the ring of the Rink S. C., Brooklyn, to-night in a twelve round encounter with Jimmy Hanlon of Denver. Moran has done excellent work in this vicinity and can be depended upon to set a fast pace in his contest with the rugged and combative Hanlon. The Denver boy is of the rushing, mauling and aggressive type and it takes a clever, stiff punching opponent to stave him off.

Judging by the past performances of the pair, the spectators at John Leon's club should see much action. In another bout Frankle Callahan, who once was a contender for the lightweight honors, will engage in a contest scheduled for ten rounds with Henry Mick, a new-comer in the ring game. Mick is a much your game man than Callahan and possesses great strength in addition to a hard punch, and the veteran will need to box at his best to win from the youngster.

Calling pool pocket billiards always seems to us rather like the super delicacy which refers to legs as limbs, but what we really started to say was that it is interesting to note that Howard Shoemaker may set sail for the amateur snooker title. There probably are a few professionals who could take him in a long match, but they are mighty few.

advantage by putting Cordier on the defensive on the first return.

Six Points in One Hand.

A run of 3 in the ninth hand gave Fink a comfortable lead in the first game and four points in the next hand made him certain of that division of play. In the second game Cordier speeded up and maintined a fast pace for a while. The score was close for thirteen hands. Then Fink, with the aid of three telltales by Cordier, a service ace and two placements, brought the score to 13—5 in his favor, and the match was practically over then and there.

Tom Coward encountered sterner resistance than he had have slead for the tell tales of the first game. It's sort of a combination salad, with everything in it which was left over. While no game for children, it is played on a table the size of a children's playground. The balls are the size of large marbles. The pockets are the result of earnest labor to invent something to keep the balls out. Rules for snooker are those of pool, billiards, golf, pinochle, bridge, trap shooting and football, with a few more added. Anything not specially covered comes under the head of unsportsmanlike conduct. But the exact term used is "not clubby."

Snooker really has much in common with golf. Walking once around the table involves the same amount of exercise as playing a 300 yard hole, and pocketing a ball is equivalent to sinking a forty foot putt.

Reports from the United States that sporting circles there were inclined to believe there was foundation for the charges made by Eattling Siki induced the champion to-day to deny flatly that there had ever been a frame-up.

"In my long ring career," said Carpentier to The New York Herald correspondent, "I have never been implicated in such dirty business as engaging in a frame-up; and it would be a pretty late day to start such stuff. Not once before or during the fight did I ever speak a single word to Siki, and I am greatly surprised that the press should be willing to give the matter such publicity."

The fight looked about the easiest thing Carpentier ever signed for, and it was partly through Georgea's carelessness that Siki happened to land the chance blow that dazed him and ended in the decision."

Battling Siki has been advised by M. Albert Sarraut. Minister of the Colonies, to return to his native Senegal. There is a strong demand that a thorough investigation of the charges be immediately instituted.
